A Complete Record of Society Events, Together With the Coming and Going of the Capital City

The Society column of the Sunday Sentinel is a pecial feature, and an effort is made with each dition to furnish such a column as will be of interant to all the readers of the Sentinel. We hope the riends of the Sentinel will still furnish us with matter for this department, an assure them that all such items are used if practicable. In preparing society items, please use but one side of the paper. All items for this column must be signed by the author, not for publication, but for our own protection.

The Washington special of the Chicago Times. arch 4. says: "The Vice President-elect wore a ack overcost, a slik hat, and brown silk gloves. Just a suggestion of immaculate shirt front was revealed, and its snowy whiteness was relieved by a plain black tie. In his button-hole a dainty rosebud was fastened. The new Vice President is a handsome man, and he never looked better and provably never felt much better than when he drove up to the White House to-day."

Hen, and Mrs. J. C. Shoemaker returned last night from a two weeks' trip to New Orleans and through the South. With the display at the Worjd's Fair they were much pleased, as also with the many attractions and objects of interest of the Crescent City and its vicinity. They visited the Eads jettics of the Mississippi, the Spanish Fort on Lake Pontchartrain, the West End, and saw pretty much all that is worth seeing in the vicinity. The attendance at the Fair, however, they report far short of what it should be they report far short of what it should be.

A Washington special describing the costumes at the fine ugural ball says: "Mrs Hendricks totlet was a superb, creamery-white satin, brocaded in amber, the reverse and facings of the train being of salmon pink silk. The whole front of the skirt was composed of netting of lace covered with a very elaborate embroider; of pearl beads laid over salmon pink silk. The leaves and the high corrage were finished with some rich beading, and many diamonds were placed with it. She carried a bounded of Marshal Niel roses and a cluster of the same fastened in the high confure."

Henry George, the author of "Progress and Poverty," is expected to lecture here in the last of of the month. Mr. George is known as agitating the question of private ownership of land. The London Times called his book "toe most dangerous book of the century." He is in no sense a socialist, nor a commuist in the common sense of the term. His reconting in Great Britain has the term. His reception in Great Britain has been enthusiastic. Every book on social ques-tions discusses his views. Since Darwin's "Origin of Species" no book has had such influence. The Committee on Arrangements for the St. Patrick's Day celebration have engaged Miller's band, of the Grand Opera House, to furnish music for the celebration and to escort the various societies from their halls to the Masonic Hall. The committee has decided to open the hall to the public after the societies are seated. Mayor Mc-Master will preside at the meeting. The committee is arranging a good programme for the occasion, and the very best vocal and instrumental talent of the city have been invited and will take part.

Mrs. William T. Ellis, residing at 219 East South street, was somewhat surprised on her return home last Monday evening to find the house filled with friends. It being the fifty second anniversary of her birth, the friends had gathered to join the family in celebrating the memorial event. But a greater surprise than this awaited her, for the friends had come prepared, and she was made the recipient of numerous and handsome presents as a partial testimony of the esteem and regard her friends have for her. After some literary exercises were listened to a tempting repast was spread, to which all did justice. After an enjoyable evening was spent the friends took their leave at a late hour, wishing her many more just such A Cincinnati Lady Claims a North Side Resident as Her Husband.

In Friday's issue of the Sentinel there appeared a paragraph stating that an attorney of this city, while visiting in Cincidnati on Sunday last, received a call from a lady, who came to make inquiries concerning her husband, who is residing on North Tennessee street, this city. The attorney in question was Mr. Robert W. Medkirk, who was seen by a Sentinel representative since the publication of the paragraph alluded to, and who related a story in connection with the matter which we deem of sufficient importance to warrant reproduction. Below we give substantially the story as reated by him:

Some two weeks ago Mr. Medkirk was reading a Cincinnati paper, in the personal column of which was an inquiry regarding the wherabouts of a gentleman with whom Mr Medkirk was well acquainted. Thinking to benefit the parties he wrote a postal card in answer to the personal, and stated that the party about whom inquiry was made was now living on North Tennessee street, giving the number of the residence, and other particulars concerning the individual. A letter came in reply, asking for more definite information, and to this Mr. Medkirk responded that he would visit Cincinnati on Sunday, and if the party writing desired to see him he could be found at a certain hotel. Mr. Medkirk visited Cincinnati, and on Sunday morning a gentleman apparently twenty-six or twenty-seven years of age called to see him, and after a lengthy conversation concerning the North Cardigan Tennessee street resident he left with the cent. at the promise that his mother would call upon Mr. Medkirk that afternoon.

The lady was true to the appointment, and upon entering the room produced a photograph of a gentleman, whom Mr. Medzirk immediately recognized as the man about whom he had written in answer to the personal in the Cincinnati paper. lady told her story briefly but candidly. She said the man referred to was her husband, they having been married in West Virginia before the war. Two sons were the fruits of the union, and when the South seceded her husband enlisted in the Federal army. Prior to this time he had industrious, affectionate and provided well for his family; but when he returned from the war and moved to Cincinnati with his family, where two more children were born. he became neglectful and failed utterly to provide for them. The lady's parents were well-to do in the world, and upon writing to them concerning the changed habits of her husband, they forwarded her money and invited her back to the home of her childhood. Her husband attempted to dissuade her from returning home, but she refused to live with him longer until he gave some Mrs. E. B. Howard has been sick the past week. substantial evidence of reformation. and, leaving Cincinnati, she returned to Virginia. The separation took place eight years ago, and since that time she had he ard nothing of her husband except that he was dead; and this information came in such a manner as to excite her suspicions that he was still living and was himself the author of the report which reached her concerning his death. Being convinced by Mr. Medkirk's statement that her husband was alive and living in this city, she inquired about his circumstances, as well as about the lady who is known here as his wife. She said that as far as she knew no divorce had ever been party, though she confessed that during her absence in Virginia applications might have been made to the courts and publication given in the newspapers without her knowledge. If he were still her husband and had accumulated any property it was her intention to make him contribute of the same to the support of her family, but when she learned that such was not the case she declared that she would enter no prosecution against him, as this would probably cause trouble to him and his family here without benefiting herself or her children. The gentleman who called upon Mr. Medkirk in the morning was her son, and is engaged in business in Cincinnati. Another son is editing a newspaper in West Virginia. and the two children born since the war, a young lady and a bright boy of ten years, are now with their mother in Cincinnati. Mr. Medkirk describes the lady as a woman of intelligence and good breeding, though she has a careworn expression which indicates that some deep trouble is weighing

AWFUL GREEN.

James Hardesty, of Seymour, Lan guishes Behind the Prison Bars All On Account of Having Assisted a Nice "Cosny" Man.

James Hardesty was slated at the Central Station last night by Patrolmen Haley and Boylan on a charge of passing counterfeit money. James is a very innecent and barmless looking indivdual, being a fresh arrival from the backwoods near Seymour. Unfortunately for himself and family, he is as green as they make 'em, or he wouldn's be languishing behind the bars at the present time. According to his story, he was prevailed upon to come to Indianapolis yesterday afternoon by one John Reno, and so anxious was that individual to have his company that he agreed to pay Hardesty's fare to this city and give him some money besides. As soon as they arrived here they began wandering about the city, and shortly after dark Reno gave his companion a $10 bill, telling him to go into a shoe store near by and purchase a pair of boots for him. The dupe did as requested and soon returned with the boots and change. Reno next sent him into a butcher shop on South Illinois street, where he worked off another "X." The pair finally struck Indiana avenue, and Hardesty shoved another one on a grocery store, purchasing some tobacco. The next place he went into the proprietor told him the money was no good. Reno was waiting for him on the sidewalk all the while, and when Hardesty reported what the store-keeper had said about the bill he hurried him up town again. The innocent protested vigorously against pushing off any more tens, but when Reno informed him that a bad bill and a counterfeit were not one and the same, he agreed to go into snother South Illinois street shop and get one changed. While Hardesty was in the store a small boy, who had followed them from Indiana avenue, notified the above officers that he was passing "coney stuff," and they at once nipped him and the bill he was about to get changed. As soon as the officers went into the store the gay de-ceiver Reno skipped, leaving Hardesty in the lurch. Reno was evidently playing Hardesty for a "mark," and he succeeded admirably. At last accounts the former was still at large, although the police at once instituted a dilligent search for him.

are perhaps the be t the New York stage has produced. The changes are startling and rapid, the scenery is excellent in detail: the costumes are bright and the women pretty. Signer Pastorini, who acts by turns an unfortunate lover and the harlequin, is an excellent pantomimist, and in the second act, where he defends himself with a broadsword and dagger against four assailants, created something of a sensation. The pantomime will be continued in all probability until after the holidays, and a child who is up in fairy lore would witness it with unbounded pleasure and astonishment. The child's parents also would not find it tedious. There was a good audience last night.

New York Tribune. "FANTASMA."-The well-known and admired Hanich Brothers produced at the Fifth Avenue Theater, on Tuesday evening, a new piece entitled "l'antasma." It is a pantomime. The Han one do not appear prominently in it, although it was invented and arranged by them. The pantomime contains mechanical tricks, tableaux, a spirited sword combat, and various aerial as well as terrestrial explone. The transformation of domestic animals into human beings. the show of the peries of Arctic voyagers, the grouping of girls, etc., are among the embellishments of the piece. The groups have been devised and made by remarkable skill. The agile gymnast
